

Howard County, MD (Part 2) (sad boi edition)

Dec 23, 2016 • 1,234 notes

Friends, I have seen some depressing houses in my short lifetime, but I have to say, this Howard County estate is seriously up there.

Built in 1999, this Certified Dank™ McMansion is a beaut, boasting 5 bedrooms crimes against the field of architecture.

The Stunted Foyer

I have so many questions regarding this space. So, so many. Rarely do I find myself completely stumped by architecture not designed by Frank Gehry, but it seems that I have met my match. I have forgone commentary in order to simply ask questions:

The Sad Sitting Room

McMansion Hell

Perhaps a seasoned architect can explain to me what is going on with this window, because my books have nothing.

The Sad Dining Room

McMansion Hell

Beige is a noun, an adjective, and now an emotion expressing various degrees of nihilism!

Very, Very, Sad Kitchen

McMansion Hell

(insert joke about sad frog hate speech claims conforming to your political beliefs)

Sad Dining Nook

McMansion Hell

(Check out that wholesomeness in the bottom-right corner! :) ) Also being smack dab in the white southern middle class, I spent a lot of time with mom at Walmart in 1999, and I've seen some things (or maybe not - lots of it was camouflage patterned)

The Not-Great Room

McMansion Hell

in the world

why not put the clock further up?? also i can only be wholesome once per post. the bottom-right corner has returned to nihilism jokes.

The Loneliest Wall in Existence: A Holiday Story by McMansion Hell

“Once upon a time there was a sad, lonely beige wall. The wall was not actually lonely - instead, the loneliness of the author is being projected onto the wall as a literary device walls aren’t sentient the end”

Master Bedroom

McMansion Hell

Are y'all too young to know about Fried Green Tomatoes? Basically it's one of the quintessential Southern Middle-Aged Mom films, along with Steel Magnolias and Gone With the Wind.

Also I just remembered - I need to clean out my tax fraud drawer.

Master Bathroom

McMansion Hell

I know Freud would have a field day with these people who build bathrooms inside their bathrooms just for their toilet.

Sad Bedroom One

McMansion Hell

Darryn now works at K-Mart, rides BMX bikes illegally on federal roads, and vapes.

Sad Bedroom Two

I was trying to decide between Confucius and Mark Twain, but Confucius had his own memes way back in the day.

Sad Reject Room

McMansion Hell

(it's my first TV-show reference be gentle) Also, in case you missed Cheryl.

Horrifying Half-Finished Basement

(NSFW) (NSFL)

McMansion Hell

"I know honey, let's finish the basement so your mom can have a place to stay!"

"Sounds great, honey!"

(*rubs hands together menacingly*) "excellent"

seriously i'm starting to go colorblind from all this beige.

Hands down the most depressing interior space I have ever seen in my life, and boy there have been some downers. I need to go take a walk. Speaking of outside...

The Rear Elevation

McMansion Hell

Fun fact: when I was a cringe-y high schooler, I wanted to write an opera about Robespierre after watching the classic anime The Rose of Versailles.

ANYWAYS, that's all for this double special! I hope you enjoyed Howard County, MD! Stay tuned for Sunday's post in which I will have created stereotypes of every over-done interior design trend of the past year as part one of the MMH Retrospective. Merry Holidays!
